Mduduzi Mathuthu is a journalist and the founder of a Zimbabwe UK-based popular online paper, New Zimbabwe.com. He is the current editor of Southern African focused newspaper The Southern Times. Mathuthu had gone to the United Kingdom in the early 2000s where he sought asylum after which he established New Zimbabwe.com. He only came back during the run-up to the July 31, 2013 elections. In October of the same year he was appointed editor of the state-controlled Chronicle replacing Itai Musengeyi. In May 2016, Mathuthu was transferred by Zimpapers to the Namibia to take up the post of Southern Times editor. The transfer to Namibia was widely viewed as a demotion apparently for having written an article on Gukurahundi that portrayed Vice President Emmerson Mnangagwa in the negative.^[1]
