Walter Mzembi is a Zimbabwean politician and a former member of the ruling Zanu-PF party. He is also the former Minister of Foreign Affairs. He previously had served as the Minister of Tourism. He replaced Simbarashe Mumbengegwi as the Minister of Foreign Affairs effective, 9 October 2017, following a cabinet reshuffle which was speculated to be a stern measure to rid Zanu-PF of factional fights. He was also a member of parliament for Masvingo South Constituency. Mzembi played a role in lobbying and organizing the United Nations World Tourism Organisation (UNWTO) conference, co-hosted by Zimbabwe and Zambia in August 2013. He was expelled from the party in November 2017, following an operation code-named Operation Restore Legacy by the military. In January 2018 he was investigated and arrested by Zimbabwe Anti-Corruption Commission (ZACC) for abuse of office and corruption whilst he was minister.

He is also the Member of House of Assembly for Masvingo South. In a cabinet reshuffle in October 2017, Mzembi was appointed as the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Accomplishments

Walter Mzembi was reported to have successfully lobbied for Zimbabwe to co-host the UNWTO together with Zambia in August 2013. This all worked to the advantage of Zimbabwe as it was put in a good light after years of negative media coverage. In turn, there was also a steady influx of tourists visiting Zimbabwe as it was portrayed as safe destination. ^[4] After the successful hosting of the UNWTO in
